- ✓ Loan support.

What is a Deposit Bond?

A deposit bond is a safe, secure and cost-effective alternative to using a cash deposit when purchasing a home.

The bond acts as a guarantee of the deposit payment and can be issued based on the net equity in your current home, money in high-interest savings accounts, superannuation and more.

There are two types of bonds available through Downsizer:

Downsizer Bond

An innovative solution for homebuyers who have enough net equity in their current home to purchase their next home without having to sell first.

Standard Deposit Bond

A traditional option for homebuyers who do not have enough net equity in their current home.

Benefits of using a deposit bond.

It's easy, secure and cost-effective.

- Allows you to stay in your current home until you are ready to sell or your new home settles.
  - Reduces the stress of having to sell first, to release funds for the next house.
  - Provides time to prepare your current home for sale and get ready to move.
- Helps avoid costly and complicated short-term loans such as bridging finance, reverse mortgages and bank guarantees.
- Secures your new property with zero cash deposit.
  - Allows you to keep long-term investments in place to continue generating income until settlement.
  - Maximises your interest by keeping your cash in your savings account.
- Fast turnaround.
  - Bonds can be issued in as little as 24 hours.
- Downsizer deposit bonds are flexible.
  - Bonds can be issued for a short-term period (up to 6 months) or longer-term (up to 66 months / 5.5 years) depending on your needs.

Pete - Downsizer for Lifestyle & Family

Pete has $800,000 amount of equity in his current home. He has qualified for a Downsizer deposit bond to secure an off-the-plan property with a purchase amount of $700,000 which is due for completion in 36 months (3 years).

Pete's costs for using a Downsizer deposit bond are:

Transaction Fee: $1,650 (inc. gst)

Bond Fee: $5,404

Total: $7,054

Pete couldn't have bought his new off-the-plan home without selling his current property as he didn't have $70,000 cash to pay the deposit and he didn't want to sell his share portfolio.

FAQ's

How do I qualify to use a Downsizer deposit bond?

You must have sufficient net equity in your existing owned properties to qualify. For a Downsizer Bond (equity-backed), your net equity must be greater than the purchase price of the new property.

What is net equity & how do I calculate it?

Home net equity is the difference between your property's market value and the balance of your mortgage. Downsizer can provide you with the current market value if you don't already know it.

How quickly can I get a Downsizer deposit bond?

Once you have submitted your application, the approval process can be done in as little as 24 hours, assuming you have submitted all the required information and documentation.

Can a Downsizer deposit bond be used to purchase an investment property?

Yes and again, all you need is sufficient net equity to qualify.

When does the Transaction Fee & Bond Fee need to be paid?

The bond fee is to be paid to the bond provider following confirmation of unconditional approval. The bond is issued once the bond fee is paid. The transaction fee is to be paid direct to Downsizer. The transaction fee invoice follows bond issuance.

What is the difference between a bond and a reverse mortgage?

A bond is issued as a digital certificate and is a guarantee that you will be able to settle on your new property when it is ready to move into. It uses the net equity in your current home as security and allows you to purchase your next home without a cash deposit.

A reverse mortgage allows you to borrow money for the deposit of your next home using the equity in your current home as security. The interest charged on the loan compounds over time, so it gets bigger and adds to the amount you borrow. You pay the loan in full including interest and fees when you sell your current home.

Why should I use a bond instead of Bridging Finance?

Bridging finance is a short-term loan of up to 12 months and is designed to "bridge" the financial gap between buying your new home and receiving the funds from selling your old one. The repayments are based on the remaining mortgage of your current home and the purchase price of your new home, which can make it a costly exercise.

Downsizer deposit bonds are a cheaper alternative as they act like an IOU for the deposit on the new property instead of you having to pay the full deposit in cash from the outset.

Can I use a combination of a bond + cash?

Yes, a buyer can combine a Downsizer deposit bond with a cash sum to purchase a new property.

What if I sell my house before my new property settles?

There is no impact on the bond. You may need alternative accommodation whilst you wait for your new property to be ready.

What happens when I settle on my new home?

On the settlement day of your new home, you pay the full purchase price. The bond expires as it has served its purpose.

What happens if I am not able to settle on my new home?

If the purchaser defaults under the terms of the contract of sale, the vendor will be entitled to make a claim on the deposit bond up to the bond amount.

What happens if the developer goes out of business?

The benefit of using a bond is that you won't have to be involved in any legal proceedings to recoup your 10% deposit, you will only forfeit the amount you paid for the bond.

Who guarantees the Downsizer deposit bond?

Deposit Power, a subsidiary of the HDI Global Specialty SE, guarantees the bond. Bonds issued by Deposit Power have an S&P (Standard & Poors) A+ rating which means it is financially secure and those using the Downsizer deposit bond can feel safe that they are using a globally rated business.
